Pragmatics: Power Up Assessment and Intervention Outcomes with EBP Techniques

This session will present an evidence-based treatment approach to address social language deficits (including paralinguistics) through a real-life video-based peer modeling method that targets comprehension of social context cues, reading and using facial expressions, vocal inflections, tone of voice. This session will highlight specific skills such as detecting sarcasm, deceit and expression of empathy. This presentation will discuss case studies and study results conducted with elementary, middle, and high school individuals with various neurodevelopmental disorders (N=41).

Course Agenda:

15 mins	Disclosures, Introduction
45 mins	Previous research studies, video modeling as an evidence-based approach
30 mins	Methodology
30 mins	Recommendations, discussion

Learner Outcomes:

1. Will explain how teaching paralinguistics such as paralinguistic decoding and use of paralinguistic cues is critical in improving social communication, specifically the ability to understand communicative intent and social context
2. Will identify and comparatively analyze pre and post- treatment study results with two clinical groups, high functioning autism and social communication disorder
3. Will define communicative intent and explain instrumental versus affective intent and Pragmatic Judgement versus Performance.
